"WHY GIRLS GO BACK HOME" IS ANSWERED MONDAY

From the obscurity and pettiness of Winesville to the fame of Broadway and back again, is the path that Marie Downey, takes in "Why Girls Go Back Home". Marie Downey, is a simple little small-town girl content with the attentions of John Ross, and looking forward to a simple life of quiet domesticity. Then one night Clifford Dudley, trying out a play traitress, his vanity by playing a passionate love scene from the stage to her.

She greatly takes his attentions seriously, believes herself engaged to him, and with visions of a stage career in the great city, follows the troupe to New York.

She is befriended by Sally Short, is jilted by Dudley, and obtains work in a revue.

The publicity which this affair gives her attracts the attention of the manager, and puts the falling show on its feet again. He starts her and she becomes the sensation of Broadway. Dudley resumes his attentions.

Finally Dudley declares that the girl who loves her and she goes him on to make some of his famous love speeches until he is quite carried away and forgets he is not acting upon the stage. She mocks him and her other guests, laugh at him as well, so he despairingly takes his leave.

However the next day Marie repents and sends Dudley a note asking his forgiveness and as the train leaves New York Marie discovers Dudley he is her, bound for Winesville and marriage with her.

"Why Girls Go Back Home" is shown Monday and Tuesday. It is based on the Catherine Brody story and was adapted to the screen by Walter Morosco.

ST LUKES ANNUAL PICNIC IS AGAIN DECIDED SUCCESS

The fifteenth annual picnic of the members of St. Luke's (R.C.) church which was held at Mott lake on Wednesday last, again proved the success which has already come to be synonymous with the term "Catholic picnic" and this was in no small measure attributable to the manner in which the great host of ladies of that denomination worked to ensure the result.

Of course their big aim was to make sure that the big chicken supper with which they always set, and in addition they saw to it that the side shows of ice-cream soft drinks and other refreshments were available at all times for the vast number of the hot and tired pioneers who thronged the grounds.

During the afternoon a long list of races and sports was run off, and good competition in all the events made them doubly interesting.

The winners of the various events were—

Boys under 10—Rowe; 4; Gander-ton; 2; Goulet; 3.
Girls under 10—Bodvin; 1; Horne; 2; Tomlin; 3.
Boys under 15—Dupre; 1; Walton; 2.
Girls under 15—Kinghorn; 1; Reich; 2.

100 yds open—Harden; 1; Airth; 2.
Girls over 15—St. Pierre; 1; Leroux; 2.
Men's 3-legged—Horton and Torg; 1; and R. P. LaFrance; 2.

Men's Quarter mile—Harden; 1; Jackson; 2.
Men's swim—Bibby; 1; Posher; 2.

High jump—Lepper; 1; Posher; 2.
Broad jump—Dahl; 1; Airth; 2.

Cracker eating—Michon; 1; Gordon; 2.

Bean guessing—Tierney; 1.
Best cake—Mrs. Goulet; 1; Mrs. Tait; 2.

The affair wound up with a dance in the evening at the theatre at which quite a large number enjoyed themselves, and the fifteenth annual has gone down in the annals as equal to if not surpassing any of its successors.

The several committees in charge deserve to be thanked for the help and assistance in any way in the fulfillment of the great annual occasion.

Fabyan Petroleum Limited Drillers Now All Ready To Go

Drillers of the Mystery Well to be in charge of first hole for New Company.

Legal sub-division 8 on section 24-45-8-4 will be a busy spot during the next few days. We have it on first class authority that the first hole for the Fabyan Petroleum Limited is to be started right away, and that the work has been let by Field Manager Williams to Messrs Allison and Adams.

Incidentally these are the two well known drillers who worked up the enthusiasm in the field in the first instance when they drilled the Fabyan No. 1 well for the Imperial company, which well (since described more aptly as the "Mystery Well" is now admitted by an oil and gas producer.

Since that time (1922) these real oil chiefs have been successfully carrying on and bringing in other producers in the area.

CROP REPORT FROM MANAGERS BANK OF MONTREAL

The crop report of the Bank of Montreal from its branch managers says that wheat, which is generally headed out in the prairies, is now approaching the critical period. So far, the crops are coming along satisfactorily, although rain would be welcome in some parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta, where very hot weather has prevailed.

In Alberta conditions continue satisfactory; wheat is heading out as a result of about a week of hot weather. Moisture generally is sufficient for the moment, but rain would be beneficial. All reports indicate a good crop, where moisture is required, although wheat in summer-fallow and new breaking is still standing up fairly well there.

In the southeastern area, crops are suffering from hot weather and range from very fair to poor. The average yield will probably be low.

HOLLYWOOD COM. TO MAKE FILM AT JASPER PARK

Jasper, the world's largest national park is to provide the setting for one of the great moving picture epics of the year. "The Country Beyond," an adaptation of the story of that name by James Oliver Curwood, which is produced by the Fox Film corporation under the personal direction of Mr. Irving Cummings. The cast, which is a notable one includes such stars as Olive Borden, J. Farrell MacDonald, Ralph Graves, Fred Kohler, and Lawford Davidson, as well as a number of others of outstanding ability.

Two sections of the park have been chosen by Mr. Cummings as the setting for his play. Last week the company started work beside the jade waters of the Lake of Forgiveness, which lies in the shadow of Mount Edith Cavell. There and about Jasper Park Lodge, on the shore of Lac Beauvert, the preliminary work is being carried on. Later the entire company will move by pony trail to Maligne lake, where the remainder of the picture will be filmed. The work will occupy almost three weeks and it calls for an expenditure of almost a quarter of a million dollars.

Never before has Hollywood come so far north to film a picture, but this is the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a complete screen feature has been produced in the north.

The Exax motor works exactly on the same principle as the Diesel motor used in the largest steamships. It is manufactured in Europe and may be obtained in sizes going to three horse-power. This smallest size which is almost ideal for light farm work and domestic use is of simple construction and can be run for eight hours continuously at a cost of less than 25 cents. There is no magnet or carburetor and practically nothing to get out of order.

The Wainwright crude oil has already proved its value as a fuel oil and is said to be particularly suitable for the Exax oil engine of the Diesel type.

Dr. A. Macbeth motored down from the city accompanied by his wife and little son. They are staying a couple of days with Mrs. Dr. Wallace at the lake before proceeding further south.

Attention is drawn to the big auction advt. on another page of this issue. Steve Bowman will be selling the holdings of the late Mr. Robt. Mills at the farm south of Green-shields on Tuesday, August 3rd next.

Miss Lunan, an old school chum of hers is staying with Mrs. H. Mont-gomery at her lake cottage for a holiday.

Big Canadian Market Awaits Oil Industry

Where shall we find a market for the output of western oil fields?

An answer to this question is found in the yearly report of the Dominion bureau of statistics on Canadian trade says the Alberta-Oil Examiner.

In the fiscal year ending March 31, 1926, Canada spent the huge sum of $46,059,810 on imports of petroleum, asphalt and their products. Imports of this nature are increasing by leaps and bounds. For the figures for 1924 and 1925 are $32,344,785 and $38,105,478 respectively. At this rate of increase Canada will spend at least $55,000,000 on petroleum imports in the current year.

When it is taken into consideration that every class of petroleum and asphalt imports is obtainable from the oil deposits of Canada, the tremendous home market and corresponding possibilities ahead of the oil industry are obvious. It will require years before Canadian fields can begin to produce enough for home consumption.

When, of course, as soon as the home market is supplied, the markets of the world will readily absorb any exportable surplus.

The great bulk of these oil imports came from the United States, totalling $38,957,320 for the fiscal year as compared with $34,291,870 for the previous year. Crude oil for refining purposes formed the largest single item, totalling 363,300,243 gallons worth $17,660,590. Other oil imports for refining purposes totalled $4,306,854. Gasoline imports amounted to $8,291,800. Gasoline imports totalled $7,386,396.

Petroleum imports from the United Kingdom totalled $4,550 for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1926, as compared with $4,430 the previous year.

Canada is helping enrich American oil operators and investors in the profits from refining and distribution come to the pockets of Canadians. Crude oil comes into Canada duty free, and this has resulted in a considerable refining industry being built up, ready to handle the output of Canadian wells.

As regards imports, the oil industry is a parallel to the coal industry. Canada imports both when she has ample supplies at home. The people of Ontario and Quebec among whom there is the greatest market, spend millions every year for Pennsylvania coal.

SOMETHING LACKING AT AUTO CAMP

Thanks to the efforts of the Board of Trade officials, the auto camp is proving itself a very acceptable spot for touring travellers to spend the night on their way higher and yon, but there still remains one little accommodation which is lacking—and one which is by no means a trifling one. There is as yet no stove or heating service available in the camp, and it would seem meet that such a deficiency should be remedied right away. The cost surely cannot be prohibitive, and possibly the Town Council can be persuaded to assist the project in this matter seeing that all that has been accomplished so far has been accomplished so far has been due to the financial support (and time) of the Board of Trade.

The Government will use every endeavour during the coming five years to justify the hearty endorsement given on its 28th inst. by the citizens of Alberta, by working for the promotion of the prosperity of our province and our people, without regard to political affiliations or class distinctions, and know that 'n doing so they will have your continued support.

Yours very truly
H. E. G. H. Schofield,
Chairman Publicity Committee.

MENTAL HOSPITALS ARE OVER-CROWDED WANT MORE SPACE

EDMONTON. That it will be necessary for the Alberta government to make provision in the near future for increased accommodation at the three provincial mental hospitals was the burden of a statement given to Premier Brownlee and Health Minister Headley, by a delegation of hospital officials. Dr. E. H. Cooke, superintendent of the Ponoka Institution, Dr. W. J. McAllister, superintendent at Red Deer and Dr. D. L. Dick, superintendent at Oliver, laid before the government the existing conditions at their respective posts, and made it clear that the capacity stage was rapidly being reached.

There are now about 1,100 patients under care in the three hospitals; it was stated in the course of the discussion.

H. B. COMPANY IS COMING INTO LOCAL OIL FIELD

CALGARY. That the association of the Hudson's Bay company and E. W. Marland in oil development in Western Canada indicates the most big vision of the Alberta oil field by British interests which may be linked with the Royal Dutch Shell, is a conclusion drawn by local oil men, following the announcement of the Hudson's Bay company in Winnipeg Thursday.

Mr. Marland is one of the biggest independent operators in the North American continent and the J. Pierpont Morgan company has been buying heavily into his companies in the last few years. The Morgan company represents the Roxana company, which is the United States subsidiary of the Royal Dutch Shell.

The Marland-Hudson's Bay company interests are getting quick action in respect of their investigations. G. W. Ruby, the company's geologist, passed through Friday night en route to the Ribstone and Wainwright fields, where he and his associates, three or four in number will make reconnaissance surveys. Their original holdings averaged almost two sections in every township, and they retain a large part of this land with the mineral and other rights.

Mr. Fred Gordon has improved his holdings by having the home property painted this week while Messrs Fuller and McDonald are improving theirs by erecting new fences.

Local Notes

Mr. John Harrison of Battleville enjoyed a short visit from his brother who was here from Winnipeg last week.

The town auto camp is now in demand every night, motorists from all directions, making the stop-over. Among those this week were from California—Winnipeg, Rose-ton and a couple of places in Ontario.

Mrs. R. Charter of Greenshields was a visitor to the big exhibition at Edmonton last week, and paid a visit to friends in the city also.

Your crop is practically assured now and will likely be heavy. The chief danger now is hail; let J. Welch carry that risk with a hail insurance policy. See him right away.

Local Dragons
RETURNED FROM SUMMER CAMP

"C" squadron of the 19th Alberta Dragoons, under command of Major J. Mackenzie, of Wainwright, have now returned from their ten days' camp at Wainwright and report a very successful trip.

The other officers of the squadron in camp were Lieut. H. Western, of Wainwright, and Lieut. Pitman and Capt. Chavlin.

The camp was composed of two squadrons and headquarters from Edmonton and one squadron from Wainwright and Chavlin. The local showed up splendidly in training, expending the highest aggregate for musketry and also the prize for the best shot in the regiment. In addition they also carried off the greater proportion of the prizes, among these being first for tent pegging mounted wrestling and mounted tug-of-war.

The regiment was highly complimented by Col. Gibson of Calgary, who carried out the inspection.

Wedding Bells
DAILY-HALE

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the United Church Parsonage on Tuesday July 13th when Herbert George Dally and Grace Eleanor Hale of Ribstone were united in marriage by Rev. G. Pybus. The ceremony was witnessed by Mrs. W. Yeager and Mrs. Chas. Callas. Best wishes for a long and prosperous married life are extended to the young couple.

FATHER LAYS DOWN HIS LIFE FOR TEN YEAR OLD DAUGHTER

On Wednesday last the Battle river near Fabyan claimed two more victims in the persons of Mr. D. A. Fairfield (aged 39) and his little 10-year old daughter Isabel.

It appears that the child, who lived with her father and brothers and sisters near the new pump-house close by the C.N.R. Fabyan bridge, had gone to the river bank and was playing on near a raft that lay there for the use of the family to cross the river to get into Fabyan. She was seen to fall into the water by her father, and he immediately rushed to the spot and despite the fact that he could not swim jumped into the water and clutched the sinking child. The water was too deep, however, for him to touch bottom, and he was soon struggling with two men of the "B" and "G" gang, who were across the river—Messrs Bishop and Sothers—and these rushed across to give aid.

By the time they had crossed the river the bodies had disappeared, but after fishing around at the spot for some time, they were able to find the bodies with a pole and brought them to shore. It is a significant fact that even in death they were not separated the father still having the child tightly clutched in his arms when the bodies were regained.

Dr. Middlemass, of Wainwright, who had been phoned for, made a rush trip to the scene of the accident, and did all that he possibly could in an attempt to restore life, but without avail and the river's claim of two more victims has been written into its history.

The wife and mother of the deceased died at present unfortunately, ward of the government at Ponoka, and the others of the family are Violet, aged 12, James, aged 11 and John, aged 8 years. There are also left one brother residing at Edson and three other brothers of Mr. Fairfield in Ireland.

The double funeral was held on Friday from the Anglican church when Rev. A. Love preached an impressive service over the two bodies which were reverently laid in the one grave at the Wainwright cemetery. The pall-bearers were: Messrs G. McLean, S. Bowerman, H. Montgomery and G. Mosely.

Beautiful floral offerings were laid on the coffins by Mrs. McBride (the housekeeper) and the orphan children as well as from friends at Kinsella, Edmonton and Wainwright.

'SATAN IN SABLES'
By Bradlau King
Copyright 1925 Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

'Satan in Sables' with Lowell Sherman is a picturization of this novel.

'Wait a moment,' said Emilie hastily. 'I haven't said I wouldn't do it. I have. I've always wanted to go to South America for I have some friends there. You can go there, Michael said, the further the better!'

'But how can we arrange things?' Emilie whined. 'and how do I know that you will keep your promise?' 'How dare you talk like that to my friend?' Decline roared. 'He does not know any better. Then, to Emilie, 'There is a card with the address of my lawyer. Be there at noon sharp tomorrow, and the matter will be settled and the passage money paid to you. You have my word that you will not be molested.' That is enough.

'I will be there!' Emilie muttered. Michael turned toward Billy. 'We'll take the boy back to his Aunt tonight. Decline supplemented to Emilie: 'If you go near their home, I'll guarantee that you'll be in prison within an hour. And you know by this time that Decline keeps his word!'

Michael took Billy into his arms and left the room with Decline. Emilie, alone, smiled faintly in relief and savor.

Once safely out into the street downstairs, Michael thanked Decline for his aid.

'Was he really responsible for the Frecheville murder?' he asked. 'I had to keep very still for fear I would put my foot in it.'

'Sometimes a bluff is an excellent weapon. Monsieur. Decline smiled, 'I always thought he had committed the crime but I had no proof. Yet you observed how a few words carried with a high hand made his own guilty conscience do the trick?'

There was no response and Michael walked in.

Michael laughed in admiration of Decline's craftiness then grew serious as he said: 'I shall never forget your aid in this matter, my friend. Remember, I have your promise to come and see me soon. You and I are going to have a heart-to-heart talk about yourself!'

Decline smiled a little sadly. 'Your intentions are the best, Monsieur, but I fear it is too late for me to change. You wouldn't say that if you knew what was going on in my life, Michael laughed. 'But I will tell you more when I see you again. And now, good-bye, my friend.'

He found Lamont anxiously awaiting him. 'I certainly am glad to see you, Michael said. 'for my arms are about broken with carrying this youngster. Lifting cocktail glasses is no exercise to prepare for carrying children. For Heaven's sake, hold him a moment until I can get a taxi!'

He passed the sleeping boy over to the detective with a sigh of relief. Later, when they were riding toward Colette's house, Michael rectified his adventure but made no mention of the Frecheville matter. He laid stress instead on Emilie's deadly fear of Decline, and told how Emilie had agreed to leave the country.

'A good riddance! Lamont commented. 'But I can't quite understand what hold Decline has over him—over all the Apaches in fact. That chap's a queer bird!'

'Just his strong personality—his brains,' Michael declared. 'By the way have you anything definite against Decline? Any crime that has been fastened on him?'

'Well, not I can't say that we have. Personally, I think he is just a fellow with a chronic grudge against the world in general and French society in particular, and vents his spleen by making radical speeches to his satellites.'

'Precisely! It is just a case of an intelligent man nursing a grievance until his whole perspective is warped. In this case, however, the grievance is just—for a grave wrong was done him. Well, I'm in hopes of turning him back upon the lawful path—but now, here we are.'

Lamont continued on to his home in the taxi, while Michael walked up the dark stairs of Colette's home, with Billy in his arms.

There was no response to Michael's soft knock at Colette's door, so slowly opening it he walked in. Colette, as to everything except her grief was kneeling at a small prie-dieu—a pathetic little sobbing figure.

Michael spoke gently to her. Colette, looking up quickly, passed hand before her eyes as though to brush away the cobwebs of an incredible dream.

'Fear—doubt—bewilderment—dawning realization—belief—and then Colette was on her feet, hysterically crying and laughing, while Billy melted contentedly into her arms.'

'Presently she recovered her calmness enough to remember to thank Michael.'

'Everything is alright now, little girl,' Michael smiled, embarrassed by the worshipful effusiveness of her gratitude and trying to lightly depreciate his part. 'Come now, put the youngster to bed—he has had a hard experience.'

Colette suddenly took Michael's hand and kissed it. In all his life Michael had never been so flustered; he took refuge in playful gruffness. 'Put Billy to bed. I say, young lady, or I'll spank the pair of you!'

While Colette undressed Billy and tucked him safely away, Michael sat beside her and told her the rest of the good news—how, on the morrow, Billy would legally become hers forever, how Emilie was going away never to bother again.

'I know now,' she said after a little while and gazing over at the prie-dieu. 'What it is to descend into the darkness, into the depths, and then to have the sunshine come suddenly rushing in and to be lifted up to the heights again. I lived a thousand years since I saw you last, M'sieur, and at one time I was afraid that I was going to lose my reason; then, I realized that I must not give way, that I must keep myself in hand, so I tried to divert and fortify my thoughts by prayer. What can I say to you? What can I do to express my gratitude? My heart is to full for utterance, and I can only hope that you will realize how I feel towards you for what you have done.'

'It was nothing, dear,' he said. 'Just a little work of—of, well, pleasure!'

They were standing at the outer door, after a long while, in a happy daze.

'Perhaps you will be able to help me soon, Colette—in my troubles with my brother, Paul, which seem only beginning. You have not forgotten, have you, little girl that we are partners now, and must share our troubles and pleasures?'

'No, M'sieur,' she whispered, 'I have not forgotten. I will never forget!'

She pressed the warm palms of her small, soft hands upon his chest, while her wide and adoring eyes, flashed with full innocence and confidence straight into his.

'Come upstairs with me quickly—it is Monsieur Paul—'

'Goodnight, M'sieur — goodnight—' Michael she murmured, 'and may the good God bless you for what you have done.'

'Goodnight, Colette—dear—' And now, suddenly, the genial and roughish imp who goes around this earth smashing the thin shells of platonic friendships must have smiled with sympathetic understanding—as the lips and arms, bodies and souls of Colette and Michael flowed into one another as naturally as the sunset down, brightens into the full glory of daylight.

Michael felt himself to be an up and doing fellow indeed as he rode homeward over the wide and black-paved rivers that were the boulevards of Paris under the waning stars of past midnight. There had been a time, when Michael was in his early twenties, that people in Moscow in Vienna, in this same Paris, had involuntary turned to look at him when he strode along the streets, so cocky and pugnacious and fine a human animal was he, so pregnant was his manner with the menace and marvel of glorious youth. Tonight Michael felt all the thrilling tumult of that flush hour of his period of greatest ego roistering again in his veins; all the enthusiastic will of youth to conquer and to achieve had hounded out of his good the flabby corpulence of ambitionless lethargy.

He was in love—genuinely, tenderly, and for the first time. He would waste and idle no longer, but work and husband; he would do this, and that, and thus and so; he would be Michael Yverodt, the busy humanitarian—not Prince Michael, the trifter.

He would marry Colette, and reclaim Paul; he would father Billy, and set Emilie on two feet, face forward, in another land; he would shock, amaze, and gratify Aunt Sophia—and shake, confound, and shoe Armand, Freddy Erskin, Ninon, and the rest of that parasitical crew.

Thus, though Michael in that genial and benevolent spirit of serving which is a blessed part and parcel of the joy of giving.

This was on the flood tide of his emotional discovery of himself, as he rode home. But there is as curious and inevitable a consistency and regularity in the tides of men's moods as there is in the unceasing ocean; every flood tide has an ebbing, every rise a falling; great or small as the beach of circumstances may prescribe Sergius, with white face and un-daring eyes, met Michael at the door. 'Come upstairs with me quickly. Your Highness—it is Monsieur Paul—'

While Michael flung his hat and stick, coat and gloves anxiously aside then trotted up the stairs with him Sergius—who had become almost inarticulate through the years of service from an ingraining habit of silent anticipation without recourse to more than monosyllabic speech—explained with a color of feeling in his words rare for one so stolidly efficient.

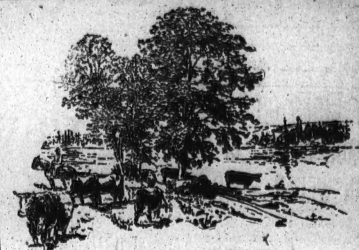

'I heard him, fall against the outer door, and found him there, sir, in a sort of stupor. He had a pistol in his hand, I took it from him, carried him upstairs, put him to bed. Then I summoned Doctor Aguel, who said—drink—shock—must have absolute quiet, or will lose mind. Doctor gave him sleeping powders. Monsieur Paul said in his delirium, sir—that that he was going to shoot—you!'

They had reached the bedside now; Michael, shocked but not surprised that Paul's delirious rage had been directed partly against him, looked down sorrowfully upon the bleary face and tumbled matted head of his once fair young brother—signs of dissipation and craze that even Sergius' kindly ministrations had not erased. Paul was so much the blighted boy that Michael's heart sank, freight-

BETTER GET TOGETHER

While it is still early in the day, this appears to be a good time to toss out a strong hint that the low tariff forces of Western Canada should get together and unite on candidates in each constituency, thus avoiding three-cornered contests which were too common last October. Essentially there is no difference between western Liberals and the Progressives—if any difference exists at all it is that the Progressives are inclined to move a lot faster than the Liberals. As a smaller body, they are more mobile.

But the lesson of last October should not be lost on both parties. By their three-cornered contests they permitted the election of numerous Conservatives who in a straight fight would never stand a chance. The result of which was the precarious position in which the Mackenzie King government was placed all through the session and its consequent resignation followed by the short-lived Meighen government which was forced to go to the country in a general election. The events of the last session of the House surely prove the necessity of giving one party or the other a clear majority to make control of the House certain.

It is beside the mark to argue that the Progressives acted as a balance wheel in the House; on the contrary they unbalanced the whole works as the Progressives did not adhere as a group to any definite policy. Witness the way in which A. M. Boutilier, M.P. for Vegreville, W.T., Lucas M.P. for Camrose, walked out on their Progressive colleagues in successive votes in the House.

It has to be admitted in Alberta that the U.F.A. desire to nominate the candidates in most of the constituencies, such candidates stand an excellent chance for election. But in selecting candidates, surely the U.F.A. did do a lot better picking than they did last October.

The time is ripe for union of the low tariff forces in the West. Failing such union, there is grave danger that the high tariff government of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen will be fastened on Canada for the next five years.

Think it over, you Liberal and U.F.A. workers.

GET THE MOST OUT OF LIFE!

An examination of the past is interesting, and a dream of the future brings hope; but happiness depends upon living today.

The joy of today depends to some extent upon the memories of yesterday, and is heightened by the anticipation of tomorrow; but the nigger sings on the levee because he has forgotten both.

Too much self-examination turns the forces of the mind inward. Work is busy with living lays the basis for happiness. Man is like a vegetable. The means of growth comes from the outside and the direction of growth is the outward. The act of growth is the source of health; and growth, with joy comes to those who work hard and play intelligently.

Playing golf for the health may be a good thing. I doubt it. I prefer to play it for pleasure and let health take care of itself. I never believed that Grover Cleveland went fishing in order to ponder state problems; and I can't be fooled with the idea that Cyrus H. K. Curtis was thinking of his stomach while playing the pipe organ which Mr. Bok says he did very beautifully.

This is the day—the very day of days; and the person who realizes it lays the physical and mental foundation of joy. The man who can protect his past by a clean record and his future by a small doctor bill; and both are attained more easily by living one day at a time than by bearing the double burden of the past and the future upon the mind.

There is in this no suggestion that history is not a noble and prophetic importance. This day depends upon yesterday and anticipates tomorrow—which is the mightiest of all reasons why it should be enjoyed. There is a time for assessing the past, a time for planning the future—but when these two processes consume all of the present they turn inward eyes that were made to search the universe, and they close ears that were made to hear music of the world. Yesterday, who has had some forty miraculous says the proverb is gone; tomorrow crashes in his racing life and still lives. Red smiled at my horror, then stepped on the accelerator, raced the engine and caught second gear with a jerk that nearly snapped my head off. From second to first was the work of a second and we were safe. That I am living today is due to Red's expert knowledge of road racing.

The total attendance at Calgary stampede for the five days of last week was 197,000, which was nearly 20,000 greater than last year. At the Edmonton exhibition and historical pageant during the present week record attendances have also been realized, more than 100,000 attending during the week.

Employment Increases

Considerable improvement over employment conditions for last year is noted during the present season. During the last six weeks the government employment bureaus have placed from 200 to 250 more per week than for the same period last year. In order to make plans for the harvest season, a conference of the western passenger association with representatives of the western provincial governments will be held the coming week at Winnipeg.

RASPBERRY AND CURRENT CONSERVE

The berry season is now at its height and the housewife who wishes to have good stock of preserves on her pantry shelves for winter use, will take advantage of any bargains she can get when she finds her dealer overstocked.

Conserves are always a delicious adjunct to hot roasts or cold cuts, and raspberries and currants are a splendid combination. A conserve made of these berries together with other fruits, provides a delightful pungent flavor which is sure to satisfy the most fastidious palate. And in addition, its lovely color helps to make a well-appointed table look more attractive.

Place two quarts of currants in an enameled ware saucepan together with a quarter of a cup of water. Simmer until the currants are soft and then press through an enameled ware colander to remove the skins. Then put the juice and pulp into the enameled ware saucepan again, add three pounds of granulated sugar and cook for about ten minutes. The surface of enameled ware is impervious to the action of fruit acids, so there will be no danger of the fruit affecting it or becoming affected by it. Then add one medium sized pineapple cut into cubes, one pint of strawberry rhubarb cut into small pieces, and the pulp and juice of four oranges with just a little of the outer rind about two tablespoons. Let the mixture simmer until it is a thick consistency. Pour into jars and when cool seal.
